I love that anime. It is one I will never grow tired of. The animation, music, story, characters, and setting just flow so smoothly together. I even love the movie and video games they created to go along with the anime so, naturally, I was looking forward to reading the manga. When I picked this up, I was beyond ecstatic! I mean, this is Cowboy Bebop for crying out loud! Of course it's going to be epic! Well... I read it... and Recently, I finished watching Cowboy Bebop for the millionth time. I love that anime. It is one I will never grow tired of. The animation, music, story, characters, and setting just flow so smoothly together. I even love the movie and video games they created to go along with the anime so, naturally, I was looking forward to reading the manga. When I picked this up, I was beyond ecstatic! I mean, this is Cowboy Bebop for crying out loud! Of course it's going to be epic! Well... I read it... and I was left a bit overwhelmed. It wasn't bad... however, it was good either. It was just... there. Nothing really exciting happened until the last two chapters and even then it was a bit overshadowed by the... bizarre art style. I was expecting something amazing to happen in the manga and that did not happen.I don't doubt that Cain Kuga has talent. It's obvious. However, I don't feel her artwork nor her story-telling fits with the Cowboy Bebop universe. The artwork just did absolutely nothing to complement its anime counterpart. Spike looked like a completely different character. Ed looked nothing like herself nor acted like herself (more on that later). The only one that looked much like himself was Jet. Faye looked a bit like herself. All of the spaceships seemed... off... and the background was nothing to drool over. I feel like Kuga's artstyle is more for bishouen type characters... or buffy characters. There's no middle ground with her. Her story-telling was a bit... bland. It was towards the end where I was actually interested where <sup>3</sup> was going, I wanted to know more about Scorpion and how he would direct the Dragon Syndicate. However, I am told that my intrigue ends. Everything else was a bit of a fear. The characters were the characters we came to know and love. I suppose Spike and Jet's personalities were intact... but Ed? No! It wasn't Ed. I don't know who it was, but it wasn't Ed. She acted spoiled, spoiled, irritating, speedy and patoA ©tica. I'm sorry, but the Ed you know wouldn't go out there acting like a jerk. Strange though she was in the anime, she was never one to duck down to get what she wanted. That was... insulting her character. She never made careless mistakes and never said things more than once! (Except for Faye's name, which was cute and catchy in the anime... not so much here.) The other characters I have some complain js (as Spike forgot to get food. What the hell?) but none compares with how I feel about the interpretation of Edward's character. In short, there's a manga you shouldn't read if you don't really like the anime and you don't want to see another take on it... but you can read it once. There's no point in going through so many pains twice. Well, since it ended on a very high note, maybe the second volume wasn't bad. As I said, the end of this volume was quite interesting, so I'm not going to read the <sup>3</sup> to see where it goes. Hopefully, Kuga had enough time to improve the story and <sup>3</sup> not kill the characters more than she had already done. Still, I recommend it at least once. Remove it from the library if possible before you decide to buy it. ...Want more? Advanced embed details, examples and help!
